Cuzco, Peru :

Peru is located in the west side of South America. Peru is known for its rich culture since it had one of the greatest pre - colonial Empire, the Inca Empire. Peru's capital city is Lima known as the "Ciudad de los Reyes" (Kings City) because of its colonial architecture.

The city of Cuzco, is without a doubt one of the most important destinations in Peru. There are Incan buildings waiting to be discovered them among its cobble-stoned streets. This magical city also has an exciting nightlife with cafes, restaurants, and bars for all tastes. Just ten minutes away from the city, there are the massive walls of the Sacsayhuamán fortress, and a few kilometers from there, you will find the archeological sites of Qenko, Pukapukara, and Tambomachay, Incan buildings constructed completely with stone.

The enigmatic complex of MACHU PICCHU, THE LOST CITY OF THE INCAS, is the most important and beautiful legacy of the ancient Peruvians. It is part of the Historic Sanctuary of the same name, recently named one of the NEW SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD. It is located high on top of a mountain and complements the exuberant nature that surrounds it, creating a one of a kind place in the world.

Highlights

LIMA

- Huaca Pucllana, a magnificent Inca ceremonial and administrative center.
- Historical Center and many points of interest such as the Main Square (Plaza Mayor) founded in 1535, the Government Palace, the City Hall, Torre Tagle Palace, San Francisco Convent and its catacombs
- MUSEO DE ORO DEL PERU, One of the most important museums in Peru with hundreds of golden and ceramic pieces from the Inca and Pre - Inca times, arms of the Colonial time and much more.

CUZCO

KENKO The original name of this sanctuary is not known. The Quechua word K'enko means labyrinth. This worship site is located on what is today called Socorro hill and takes up an area of more than 3,500 square meters

PUCAPUCARA (The pink fortress): Takes its name from the color of the earth in the area. Puka Pukara was a Tambo or housing complex and food storeroom.

TAMBOMACHAY or "The Temple of the water" The name comes from two Quechua words: Tampu, meaning collective housing and Mach'ay, which means a resting place. There is also "The Bath of the Ñusta" or "Inca Maiden's Bath" which is made of two aqueducts that transport clean water all year long. This was a religious pond, where the Inca worshipped the water with the others in the Empire.

SACSAYHUAMAN: means "satisfied hawk" in Quechua. This fortress was hewn from vast granite blocks to protect the city from marauding tribes from the eastern jungle, the Antis region. Sacsayhuaman is divided into three vast zig-zagging terraces and flanked by massive stone walls, some up to 300 meters long.

KORICANCHA: It was a luxurious temple built to honor the Inti or Sun God, their greatest divinity.

MACHU PICCHU

Often referred to as "The Lost City of the Incas", Machu Picchu is probably the most familiar symbol of the Inca Empire. It was built around the year 1450. Machu Picchu was built in the classical Inca style with polished dry-stone walls. Its primary buildings are the Intihuatana, the Temple of the Sun, and the Room of the Three Windows.

PISAC is a well-known village for its typical native market and also for its Incan ruins. The hillside is lined with agricultural terraces constructed by the Inca and still in use today. With

URUBAMBA

The Urubamba Valley is also known as the Sacred Valley of the Incas. It is a laid back valley near Cusco appreciated by the Incas due to its special geographical and climatic qualities perfectly suited for farming.

OLLANTAYTAMBO

Above the town of Ollantaytambo rises the fortress of Ollantaytambo, a formidable stone structure that climbs massive terraces to the top of a peak. It was the valley's main defense against the Antis from the neighboring rain forests.
